TWO RUNOFF ELECTIONS SCHEDULED FOR MARCH 24

Professional and non-professional employees in the overall Library-wide units (except CRS, the Law Library, and the Personnel Office) will have the opportunity to vote respectively in two runoff elections on March 24. The professionals, who voted for a separate Library-wide unit in the original election but failed to give a majority to either "no union," AFSCME, or BELC, will vote whether they desire to be represented by AFSCME, Local 2477, or not.

Non-professionals will have the choice of voting for either AFSCME or BELC as their exclusive bargaining representative.

Employees who were eligible to vote in the original election and who are in an eligible category on the date of the runoff are eligible to vote in one of seven polling places depending upon where they are employed. [A poster announcing election information—polling places and voting hours—is reproduced on p. 189 of this Information Bulletin.]

READING BY ARCHIBALD MACLEISH IS SET FOR MARCH 29 AT LC

Archibald MacLeish, Pulitzer Prize-winning poet and playwright and a former Librarian of Congress, will give a reading of his poems at the Library of Congress on Monday, March 29, at 8 p.m. The program is sponsored by the Gertrude Clarke Whittall Poetry and Literature Fund. No tickets are required.

Mr. MacLeish's ties with the Library go back to 1939 when he was appointed by President Roosevelt to serve as the ninth Librarian of Congress. During his tenure (October 1939 to December 1944), he instituted a wide-ranging reorganization, brought well-known writers to the Library as consultants, and began the Library's first series of poetry readings. In December 1956 Mr. MacLeish returned to the Library to read his poems in the Coolidge Auditorium. He has also recorded selections from his works for the Library's poetry archives.

Born in Glencoe, Ill., in 1892, Mr. MacLeish was educated at Yale University and at Harvard Law School. During World War I, he served in France with the American Expeditionary Force (Field Artillery). After his graduation from law school in 1919, he taught at Harvard, and in 1920 he joined a Boston law firm as a trial lawyer. Three years later, in order to devote full time to his writing, he left the firm and moved to Paris where for five years he studied and wrote poetry. From 1929 to 1938, he worked as an editor for Fortune magazine. He was appointed director of the Nieman Fellowships in Journalism program at Harvard in 1938. While Librarian, Mr. MacLeish served simultaneously as director of the Office of Facts and Figures (1941-42) and as assistant director of the Office of War Information (1942-43). He left the Library to become an assistant secretary of state poser and author who has won success in many areas of artistic endeavor, will deliver the Louis Charles Elson lecture on "The Mind of Schoenberg" at the Library of Congress on Monday, April 19.

The Elson lectures are made possible by a 1945 bequest from the widow of Louis Charles Elson (1848-1920), Bertha L. Elson, in honor of her husband. A native of Boston, Elson was a pioneer musical scholar in the United States, an outstanding music critic, and in a position to influence most favorably the musical development of his country.

Born in Oxford, England, in 1915, Mr. Searle studied music, languages, and literature at Oxford University and later studied music at the Royal College of Music in London and with Anton Webern in Vienna. Since then he has composed successfully in both large and small forms and in various idioms and has been a producer of radio programs for the BBC. He has been a member of the Advisory Panel of the Sadler's Wells Ballet and the General Secretary of the International Society for Contemporary Music. He has written books on counterpoint, ballet music, Hector Berlioz, and Franz Liszt. In 1964-65, he was composer-in-residence at Stanford University and has since taught composition at London's Royal College of Music.

On April 21, Mr. Searle's newest work will receive its premiere performance in New York. Written in honor of the American Bicentennial, it is a musical setting of "Contemplations" by Anne Bradstreet (1612-1672), the British-American poet who came to America in 1630. The performance will be given in Alice Tully Hall by the Clarion Orchestra conducted by Newell Jenkins, with Jan DeGaetani at soloist.

Mr. Searle's lecture will be the 19th in a series that has brought some of the most prominent names in the field of musicology, belles lettres, and anthropology to the Library of Congress.

Although admittance to the lecture is by invitation, persons wishing to attend should call the Music Division on ext. 5502.

MAP COLLECTION EXHIBITED

In April of 1975, the Library acquired some 9,500 sheets of maps from a collection assembled by Feldzeugmeister Franz Ritter von Hauslab, a 19th century Austro-Hungarian military geographer. [See LC Information Bulletin, June 20, 1975, p. 252.] Selections from this collection are on display on the Ground Floor of the Main Building through June 30.

The exhibit presents the wide variety of the geographer's interests. World, topographic, relief, volcanic, and military maps are displayed, as well as manuscript maps and city plans. Of special interest are examples of caricature cartography, where the map is drawn to render a comment on the area surveyed. Hauslab studied with the inventor of lithography, Alois Senefelder, and examples of early two-color lithographic maps are shown.

LC, AUSTRALIA TO EXCHANGE TAPES

The Library of Congress and the National Library of Australia have concluded an agreement for the exchange of U.S. and Australian MARC tapes beginning April 1. The terms of the exchange are essentially the same as those of the agreements between the Library of Congress and the National Library of Canada and the Réunion des Bibliothèques Nationales de Paris [reported in the LC Information Bulletin on December 20, 1974, p. 419, and September 12, 1975, p. 358.]

At the time when the Australian MARC tapes become available to interested subscribers within the United States, an announcement of the service will be made in the Information Bulletin. The Library's Cataloging Distribution Service Division will handle the subscriptions.

MOTION PICTURE COMMITTEE MEETS

The Motion Picture Committee, under the chairmanship of the Assistant Librarian of Congress, Elizabeth Hamer Kegan, met in the Main Building Conference Room on March 9. Current relations with the American Film Institute and the National Endowment for the Arts were outlined by Alan Fern and John Kuiper, chief and assistant chief of the Prints and Photographs Division, and there was general discussion of a national program for collecting television programs. Barbara Ringer, Register of Copyrights, reported on the status of copyright revision as it relates to television and the Library's collections. Mr. Kuiper distributed a report on the UNESCO meeting he attended in Berlin in September 1975 on the preservation of moving images and another report on the preservation of color film and television programs.

RESEARCH NOTIFICATION SYSTEM CREATED

At the direction of the Senate Committee on Appropriations, the Congressional Research Service has created a Research Notification System. Under this new responsibility, CRS is acting as a reporting center for all major research by the Congressional Budget Office, the General Accounting Office, the Office of Technology Assessment, and CRS itself. A biweekly directory listing all projects newly initiated, current research, and all research completed during the preceding six months by the four legislative agencies is submitted to the Senate and House Appropriations Committees. The directory should help eliminate duplication of research and enhance interagency cooperation.

An executive group with representatives from CBO, GAO, and OTA has been formed to make sure that the Research Notification System and other coordinating arrangements are working well. The acting Director of the Congressional Research Service, Norman Beckman, has been elected its chairman. The group is also responsible for promoting additional cooperation among their respective agencies, sharing of information and work products, carrying out of joint research activities as appropriate, and dealing with issues of mutual concern as they arise.

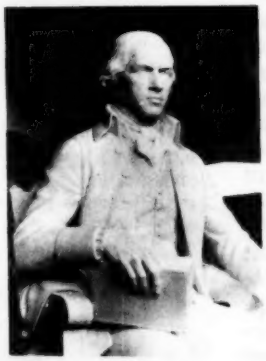
MADISON STATUE DELIVERED TO NEW BUILDING



Walker K. Hancock's eight-ton statue of James Madison was delivered to the still unfinished Library of Congress James Madison Memorial Building on Monday, March 1. The timely arrival nearly coincided with the date marking the 225th anniversary of Madison's birth on March 16, 1751.

Carved from a 30-ton block of marble, the larger-than-life representation of the fourth President will remain crated and out of public view until the building is finished. Persons fortunate enough to be on Independence Avenue during the delivery, however, got a glimpse of the statue as a side of the crate was removed in order to allow the sculptor, Mr. Hancock (lower right photograph), to inspect his work, which had been shipped from Italy. The sculpture was completed last year (see the LC Information Bulletin of April 4, 1975, pp. 125-126).

planning and development, correspondence, and international programs at various locations throughout the District. The Spring Schedule of Classes may be obtained from the Graduate School, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250. Hundreds of courses in various Federal agencies are listed in the Interagency Training Catalog of Courses, available for $3.55 from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. The American University has issued its Off Campus Bulletin for the College of Continuing Education with course descriptions for summer 1976.

The Training Office of the Library reports that copies of catalogs from other institutions are available for consultation in their office. Applications for the Tuition Support Program will continue to be accepted at least 30 days in advance of registration until June 30 for fiscal 1976. Staff members should consult Special Announcement 678 (March 3, 1975) for complete details.

Registration for the U.S. Department of Agriculture Graduate School courses will be held March 22-27 in Room 1339 of the South Building, 14th St. and Independence Ave., S.W., from 11 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. weekdays and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday. Registration will be held in the lobby of the Ground Floor, Annex Building, Library of Congress, on March 23 between 10 a.m. and noon.

STAFF NEWS

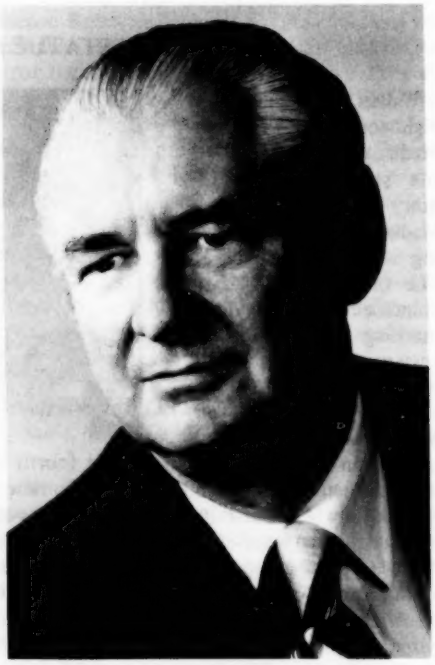
RETIREMENTS

Dorothy W. Bartlett, bibliographer in the Geography and Map Division, retired on February 27 after 32 years of Federal service, 14 of which were spent in the Library of Congress.

Before joining the staff of the Library of Congress, Mrs. Bartlett was employed by the Foreign Economic Administration, the Soil Survey in the Department of Agriculture, the Cartographic Archives Department of the National Archives, the Department of State, and the Map Library of the Central Intelligence Agency. Her first appointment in the Geography and Map Division was as head, Reference and Bibliography Section; she advanced to bibliographer in 1970.

Mrs. Bartlett was guest at a retirement luncheon on February 26, attended by division and Library colleagues. She received as gifts a pair of jeweled forget-me-not earrings and an album with snapshots of her associates.

Mrs. Bartlett will continue to reside in Reston, Va.



Mr. Marley

S. Branson Marley, Jr., chief of the Serial Division, Reference Department since 1968 retired February 28. Mr. Marley came to the Library in 1949 as a research analyst in the Reference Division.

A native of Henderson, N.C., Mr. Marley received his A.B. degree in history and political science in 1937 from the University of North Carolina, where he also pursued graduate studies in history. After graduation, he was a project supervisor for the Historical Records Survey Project in Raleigh, N.C., from 1938 to 1941. For the next two years he was professor of history and head of the Department of History and Social Science at the Oak Ridge Military Institute in Oak Ridge, N.C. From 1943 to 1947, he was head of the Accessioning Unit in the Historical Records Section of the War Production Board.

After joining the Library in 1949, Mr. Marley was promoted in 1959 to assistant chief of the Defense Research Division in the Reference Department. Mr. Marley was the recipient of Meritorious Service Awards from the Library in 1960 and 1962, and on January 13, 1975, he was awarded a 30-year Federal Service pin by Paul L. Berry, director of the Reference Department.

The retirement of Freeman H. Quimby on February 27 after 10 years of service in the Science Policy Research Division, marks another step in his distinguished career.

Mr. Quimby earned his Ph. D. at the University of Maryland School of Medicine, and taught in two universities. For 12 years he was with the Office of Naval Research, rising to the position of chief scientist in the San Francisco office. He then spent two years with the Army Research Office before joining the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, first in life sciences, and then in charge of their activities in exobiology. Throughout his career, he has maintained his professional activities, publishing about 30 principal papers.

His colleagues will continue to be grateful for the qualities he brought to his work in the Congressional Research Service. He has an inquisitive mind, and ability to write with clarity, and a willingness to take any assignment, complex or elementary, and give it his best. He was a careful editor of the efforts of his colleagues, and a dedicated teacher of younger staff members.

While he had many studies to his credit in CRS, perhaps the one of the greatest impact was The Politics of Global Health, which was praised by the House Foreign Affairs Committee and later used at several international meetings as an agenda for negotiations among nations.

His friends at the Library wish him well, and hope for many more years of productive activity.

A task force of 44 librarians, library users, trustees, administrators, and citizen representatives recently completed a state long-range plan for libraries in Colorado. The plan, approved by the State Board of Education, will serve as a guide for the policies and budgets of the Colorado State Library. It is of interest to library personnel, trustees, school board members, local and state officials, and citizens concerned about libraries in the state. The task force worked for two years collecting information and testimony on the problems and aims of school, academic, public, and private libraries in Colorado. A major study of the usage and attitudes of the citizens of the state was part of the information collection stage of the plan's development. The plan also includes key stategies for improving library service. Copies of the plan may be obtained by writing the Colorado State Library, 1362 Lincoln, Denver, Colo. 80203.

The National Commission on Libraries and Information Science has announced the appointment of a Task Force on a National Periodicals System. Vernon E. Palmour has been retained by the NCLIS to serve as director of the task force. The purpose of the task force is to prepare a specific plan for the establishment of a National Periodicals System. Drawing upon the earlier study by the Association of Research Libraries, "Access to Periodical Resources: A National Plan," the task force will plan the steps required to bring the desired National Periodicals System into being: specification, organization, management, funding, service obligations, and implementation strategy. Further information on the task force and its membership is available from NCLIS, 1717 K St., N.W., Suite 601, Washington, D.C. 20036, tel. (202) 382-6595.

Participants in the first Midwest Region Library Network Symposium, held at Oakland University, Rochester, Mich., on January 8, unanimously passed the following resolution:

> Resolved, that the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science strongly support the concept of the Library of Congress as the center of a national bibliographic system. To this end, the Library of Congress should be encouraged and assisted to do the following:
> (1) to continue the distribution of its own current cataloging in machine-readable form and to accelerate the schedule of inclusion of additional foreign-language materials, (2) to actively pursue the COMARC concept of collection, verification, and redistribution of non-MARC Library of Congress cataloging transcribed by other libraries, and (3) to expand COMARC as soon as possible to include the collecting, verification, and redistribution of high quality cataloging of other libraries.

The Urban and Regional Information Systems Association (URISA) has issued a call for papers for presentation at its 14th annual conference to be held in Atlanta, Ga., on August 29 through September 2 on the subject of Information Systems as Services to Citizens. REPORT ON OBJECTIONS, RULING ON CHALLENGED BALLOTS, CERTIFICATION OF BARGAINING REPRESENTATIVES, AND DIRECTION OF RUNOFF ELECTION

The election in this matter was held on February 18, 1976, and the tally of ballots was served on February 19. Thereafter, on February 23, BELC filed timely objections to conduct affecting the results of the election. These objections are ruled on herein. On February 26 BELC filed a further objection to conduct affecting the results of the election, which objection is likewise disposed of herein. As the number of challenges in the professional unit of the General Library election was sufficient to affect the results of that election, and as BELC objected to the Umpire's suggestion that ruling on the challenges be waived in the interest of expediting the procedure, the Umpire has investigated the challenges, and they are also ruled on herein.

(A) The objections

(1) BELC objects to statements in a letter dated February 13, 1976, from the Librarian to each member of the staff. The letter reads as follows:

> As I am sure you are already aware the representation elections provided for under the Library's new Labor-Management Relations Program, LCR 2026, are about to take place. I would therefore like to take this opportunity to remind each of you of the importance of these elections and impress upon everyone concerned that the outcome, in order to be truly representative, will require the cooperation, participation, and personal interest of each staff member.
> It is important that everyone eligible to vote do so during the prescribed hours on February 18, 1976. By voting your choice you will help to make the election a more accurate reflection of the interests and desires of Library employees, will contribute to the effectiveness of the Labor-Management Relations Program, and of the Library of Congress.
> Please vote.

BELC objects to the letter as suggesting that the Library administration leans toward compulsory voting. Particular emphasis is placed on the word "require", and on the concept that "the outcome, in order to be truly representative will require the . . . participation . . . of each staff member."

The Umpire finds that the Librarian's letter does not constitute grounds for setting aside the election. Nothing is more common in elections than last-minute exhortations by all parties to encourage the voters to exercise the franchise. Such exhortations are often couched, as is the Librarian's here, in completely neutral terms. The statement that each member must participate to ensure that the outcome is "truly representative" may be open to debate as to its accuracy. The concept of "truly representative" can mean different things to different people. To some it means unanimous or near-unanimous participation. To others, it means that a clear majority of potentially eligible voters must have voted for the winning side. To still others it may mean a substantial turnout (perhaps over 50 percent, perhaps less), and a majority (or in some elections a plurality) for one side. There are undoubtedly still other ways of defining "truly representative." Whatever the Librarian may have meant by the phrase, and whatever each recipient of the letter may have understood by the phrase, the Umpire cannot find that its use affected the election to the extent that it required setting the election aside. In essence, apart from the appeal to vote, the statements in the letter reflect the Librarian's opinion. No employee receiving this statement was under any compulsion or coercion to vote. Insofar as the Library told employees that those who did not vote would be bound by the choice of those who did vote, its statement was accurate. Indeed, in the absence of any suggestion of restraint or coercion, the Umpire cannot find that any organization has any standing to complain over a non-partisan appeal to eligible voters to exercise the franchise. So far as the Umpire is aware, no election in the public or private sector has ever been set aside because of such an appeal, and indeed this may be the first time any such argument was formally advanced. The foregoing discussion also applies to BELC's objection to the slip circulated by the Library reading: "Don't let someone else make the decision for you. Vote tomorrow."

(2) BELC objects to the statement in AFSCME's leaflet of February 17, which read (in solid capitals): "BELC has lied; is lying and will continue to lie." The balance of the leaflet contains nothing by way of substantiation, support, or elaboration of the quoted phrase. Such empty name-calling ("Your're a liar") certainly does not contribute to the dignity of an election campaign. As obvious election propaganda, it contains nothing which requires setting the election aside. As stated by the court in declining to set aside an election in Olson Rug Co. v. N.L.R.B., 260 F.2d 255, 257 (C.A.7, 1958), "Prattle rather than precision is the dominating characteristic of election publicity . . . " The Library electorate is well able to evaluate campaign propaganda. A mere cry of "Liar" is not sufficient to taint the entire election process. If it were, it would be necessary to analyze all the BELC propaganda to make sure that the AFSCME characterization is false. The point is that true or false, the bare accusation by one side that the other has not told the truth (in some vague, unspecified way about some vague, unspecified matter) is not of itself ground for setting aside the election.

(3) BELC objects to three statements in the AFSCME leaflet of February 18, As to the statements attributed in that leaflet to Cook and Foster, BELC alleges that the year is which they were made was not 1974, and that "the circumstances surrounding these two apparently favorable statements were entirely different then than what they are now." The Umpire finds no merit in the objections as to the Cook and Foster statements. Cook is widely known as a leader of BELC, and was so identified in the AFSCME leaflet. As it is obvious that he now supports BELC and not AFSCME, the Umpire can find nothing prejudicial to the fairness of the election in AFSCME's claim that he at one time supported it. Whether this support was voiced in 1974 or in some prior year would be immaterial, for in any event his present views are widely known. The error as to the year is unconsequential. The statement attributed to Foster does not even mention AFSCME. Again an error as to the year would appear immaterial, as the claimed year, 1974, is long before the election.

BELC also objects to the following statement attributed to James Johnson: "No matter what BELC says about my case, I was and am well satisfied with the representation AFSCME Local 2477 provided me with." BELC alleges that Johnson "has denied making the alleged statement at all." The Umpire's investigation disclosed that the statement attributed to Johnson is a substantially accurate representation of his opinion, and conforms in essence to a statement he made and to which he now adheres although it may not be an exact quotation. Moreover, none of the supporting documents submitted by BELC indicate that the Johnson matter was important in the pre-election campaign. In view of the actual tally of ballots, the Umpire could not regard the Johnson matter as affecting the results of the election even if his investigation had disclosed any factual merit in the objection. As stated above, he finds the objection without merit, and it is overruled.

(4) BELC's objection filed on February 26 alleges that some eligible voters "were told by their supervisors and other management officials" that they were ineligible to vote. Upon receipt of this objection the Umpire promptly directed BELC to submit certain data in support thereof. Such data was not supplied. The Assistant Secretary of Labor has ruled that the burden of proof in objections to election, including submission of evidence, must be borne by the objecting party during the investigation as well as during a hearing on objections. In accordance with that ruling, the Umpire must dismiss the objection for want of supporting data. The Umpire therefore does not reach the issue raised by the Library in response to this objection that it is invalid for want of service on CREA and LLCUNAE. The Umpire further notes that for this alleged conduct to have affected the election in the non-professional unit, it must have involved, at a minimum 197 employees all of whom would have voted for AFSCME or 269 employees all of whom would have voted for BELC. Of course, 19 more "no union" votes would have obviated the question of challenged ballots in the professional unit. However, as noted above, there is no showing that even that number are allegedly involved or that those involved are professional employees. In any event, the opening of certain challenged ballots may settle that election, and if not, a runoff will be held. Under all of these circumstances the Umpire believes that the objection should be dismissed and that the request for hearing should be denied, as the alleged conduct did not in fact affect the ultimate result of the election.

However, because of the serious character of the accusation, the Umpire has examined the official instruction issued by the Labor-Management Relations and Appeals Office to department directors, division chiefs, and all supervisors. This reads in pertinent part:

"Supervisors are instructed that if an employee has a question as to his/her eligibility to vote such employees should be referred to the posted notice of election. If this is not sufficient, the employee may be referred to the Office of the Umpire. At the same time, the supervisor should suggest to the employee if in doubt that he/she present himself/herself at the polls to vote. Any question of eligibility will be eventually resolved, if necessary, by the Umpire." Any violation of this instruction should be immediately reported to the Umpire, with particulars as to the names of the employee and of the supervisor involved.

(5) BELC filed with the Umpire on February 25 a copy of its post-election leaflet, stating to the Umpire that "It is the position of BELC that the sizeable no-union vote in the General Library election . . . constitutes a repudiation by the employees of the Labor-Management Program and of the exclusive union concept . . . " The Umpire is not aware of BELC's purpose in filing this statement with him. Manifestly any person or party, including BELC, is free to draw whatever conclusion it deems appropriate and accurate from the election. If BELC regards to vote in the General Library (to the nearest 100) of 1300 for some union as exclusive representative and of 600 for no union as exclusive representative as a repudiation of the exclusive union concept, it is exercising its right to so construe the result. Since BELC has formally and officially advised the Umpire of its objection to exclusivity, however, the Umpire deems it appropriate to observe that if BELC prevails in the runoff election it will become an exclusive bargaining representative, with attendant rights and obligations.

(B) Challenged ballots

(1) BELC urges that of 11 ballots of the General Library-Professional election tentatively considered void because only the second question (choice of union) was answered, the four no-union votes should be counted. The Umpire can find no rational basis for counting those four and not the other seven, divided between AFSCME and BELC. As an original proposition, the Umpire would find considerable force in the argument that all 11 should be counted. However, the Umpire is directed under LCR 2026, Section 5, A(2) to "consider, and, where appropriate, accept an precedent applicable rules . . . made by the . . . Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations . . . " That official has formally and officially ruled that where a "professional" ballot is not marked in both sections, that ballot is void. The Umpire must consider that ruling, and as he cannot find it inappropriate he must accept it as precedent. The 11 ballots must therefore be considered void.

(2) BELC voiced strong objection to the Umpire's suggestion that investigation and determination of the challenges be waived in favor of an immediate runoff. Manifestly BELC's contention that this "suggestion" is in "violation of . . . the Instructions" is not well taken. A "suggestion" does not violate anything. If the parties had agreed to it, they would have done nothing more than they did when the ballots were being counted: namely, agreed that certain challenges should be sustained. Such as agreement on the challenges would not have violated the Instructions any more than the agreement on certain challenges at the time of counting violated the Instructions. BELC, however, has not agreed to the suggestions and the Umpire will raise no issue as to BELC's standing to object.

The Umpire has therefore investigated the challenges. Pursuant to this investigation the Umpire has determined that the challenges to the ballots of the senior examiners and of the reviewer-revisors in the Copyright Office must be sustained as they meet the definition of "Supervisor" in Section 3D of the Regulation. Both groups possess the authority effectively to recommend the promotion, discharge or reward of other employees. The challenge to the ballot of Terry Peet is also sustained on the ground that he is a supervisor. The challenges to the ballots of Catherine Croy and Richard Evensen are sustained on the ground that they are "management officials" as defined in Section 3G of the Regulation. The challenge to the ballot of James Mask is sustained on the ground that he is not a professional employee within the meaning of Section 3H of the Regulation. The remaining nine challenges are overruled. The ballots cast by the following employees will be opened, commingled, and counted on Wednesday, March 10, 1976, in the conference room next to the Labor-Management Relations Office: Akemi Inouye, James Cole, Cornelius Delaney, John Heath, Vicki Herrmann, Philip Kramer, Mary Shannon Lewin, Richard Mehaffey, Robert Reecer. After these ballots are counted, the Umpire will either certify the results of the election or direct a runoff election, depending upon whether or not the revised tally of ballots establishes a majority vote for one of the choices on the ballot.

(C) Certification of CREA and LLCUNAE

All objections to conduct affecting the results of the election having been dismissed, the Umpire is forthwith issuing certifications to CREA and LLCUNAE as bargaining representatives of the employees in Congressional Research Service and Law Library, respectively. The formal certifications will contain the formal descriptions of the bargaining units involved.

(D) Runoff election

The election among the non-professional employees of the Library (except for those in the CRS and Law Library units) was inconclusive in that AFSCME received 478 votes, BELC 442 and No Union 232. None of the choices received a majority, and therefore a runoff must be conducted among the two top choices, AFSCME and BELC. This will take place on March 24, 1976, with the same eligibility date, polling places, hours, and other details that prevailed in the election on February 18. Whether the professional unit will also have a runoff depends upon the counting of the nine ballots to be opened on March 10. If a runoff election is necessary in that unit, it will be held concurrently with the election in the non-professional unit.
